About the event:

In a public lecture to be hosted by the Foreign Policy Centre in partnership with the African Foundation for Development (AFFORD) the Hon Dimeji Bankole, Speaker of the House of Representatives will seek to explore the future of governance and democracy promotion in Nigeria.

UPCOMING EVENTS (CONT.)

While Nigeria is Africa's most populous country, it is by far the continent's largest fledgling democracy. The 2007 presidential and legislative elections were widely perceived to be the most flawed in the country's history. Initially, when President Umaru Yar'Adua was nominated by his predecessor, former President Olusegun Obasanjo, there was much speculation that Obasanjo intended to retain the reins of power by using the somewhat anonymous governor of Katsina State, as an instrument to advance his own political agenda. Today however, Yar'Adua is increasingly regarded as an enthusiastic supporter of 'better government' as a vehicle to tackling structural constraints impeding Nigeria's Development, such as the chronic power crisis.

Is President Yar'Adua simply seeking to build his own legitimacy? Will the drive for greater transparency worsen political instability? Is the Nigerian government being distracted from the business of pursuing an ambitious reform agenda? Does democracy have a future in the Nigerian political power struggle?

The Left and Iran: A Progressive Approach?

Date: 18 March 2008, 6-7.30pm

The Foreign Policy Centre

Speakers:

Baroness Shirley Williams

Nazenin Ansari, Diplomatic Editor, Kayhan

Professor Malcolm Chalmers, Professorial Fellow, RUSI

Mark Fitzpatrick, Senior Fellow for Non-proliferation, International Institute for Strategic Studies

Chair: Stephen Twigg, Director, Foreign Policy Centre, and Chair, Progress

The discussion at this event considered how progressives can respond to the challenge of Iran. The seminar sought to consider the possibilities of engagement with the government of Iran over the nuclear issue, regional security and trade co-operation. It also examined government human rights abuses and ways in which progressives in Britain could build a 'dialogue of civilisations' with reformers in Iran.

This event was held in association with Progress www.progressonline.org.uk

Corporate Social Responsibility in Emerging Markets

Date: Monday 10 March 2008, 3.00-5.00pm

Speakers:

Salvatore Gabola, Director of Worldwide Stakeholder Relations, The Coca-Cola Company

Daniel Graymore, Team Leader, Business Alliance Team, Department for International Development

Daniel Litvin, Director, Critical Resource Strategy & Analysis

Stephen Twigg (Chair), Director, The Foreign Policy Centre

At this event, the Foreign Policy Centre launched a major project on Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) in emerging markets in association with Coca-Cola Great Britain. The project will explore the role of multinational corporations' (MNC) CSR practices in emerging markets in the areas of labour standards, marketplace practices, and the environment. With an initial background paper, this launch seminar reviewed recent trends in multinationals' CSR practices, defined the latest debate on CSR, and established the context for the following three seminars which will form part of this project.

This event was held in association with Coca-Cola Great Britain.
